

ONE KILLED, 18 HURT, WHEN SHELL HITS CRUISER AUGUSTA

Anti-Aircraft Shell May Have Come From Either Chinese or Japanese Gun

JAPAN'S GUNS ACTIVE

Augusta Reached Shanghai At the Beginnig of Hostilities

(By International News Service)

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20.—One sailor was killed and 18 wounded today when an anti-aircraft shell struck the United States cruiser Augusta.

The shell struck the Augusta's well deck at 6.40 p. m. Whether it came from a Japanese or Chinese gun was not known. Japanese anti-aircraft guns have been unceasingly active on the Shanghai battle front, while the Chinese high command made little use of them on the grounds they served only to betray strategic positions.

The Augusta rushed here at the beginning of hostilities and has been anchored in the Whangpoo River for the past week. The heavy cruiser Augusta, flagship of the American Asiatic Fleet, is a crack ship, built in 1930.

Of 9,050 tons displacement, the Augusta carried a complement of 611 officers and men, is 569 feet long at the water line, and carries 23 guns of from 2 to 9 inches calibre. The vessel also is equipped with six 21-inch torpedo tubes, two catapults and four aircraft. The Augusta is equipped to cruise a radius of 13,000 miles at 15 knots.

Several British warships were lying at anchor behind the Augusta when she was hit.

Japan today abandoned her "policy of aggression," brusquely bade foreign powers to keep their hands off and put all of her resources on a war basis.

Developments:

1. Premier Koyane in Tokyo said it is essential to install this issue without the interference of foreign powers.

2. Industry, finance and minimum power under government control was voted by the Japanese cabinet.

3. Immediately the scope of the war spread. Great fires were started as the military post in Nanking the capital, and Nankow were bombed, while fighting in Shanghai was resumed with greater force. Japanese advanced in Nankow Pass and 65,000 Chinese in two columns confronted the Japanese army below Peiping and Tientsin.

4. Shrapnel raining about them, 1100 American women and children were escorted down the Whangpoo River to the steamer President Hoover by two United States destroyers, in defiance of Japanese and Chinese imitations on foreign shipping. Two thousand Americans remained, but they will be speedily evacuated
The American garrison was reinforced by 102 Marines from Manila.

Manila Welcomes Refugees

Manila, P. I., Aug. 20.—Manila tonight welcomed the American refugees from China with the severest earthquake shock felt here in many years.

The first quake struck at exactly 8 p. m., sending hysterical crowds running into the streets, smashing windows and caused three fires to break out in widely separated parts of the city.

Newspapermen writing dispatches about the arrival of the President Jefferson from Shanghai with 377 Americans aboard, were hurried out of their chairs. Power and lights went out all over the city and traffic was tied up for half an hour.

A huge crowd gathered about weeping.

A second quake, less violent than the first, struck the city at 8.20 p. m., and threw the partly calmed crowd back into another panic.

Some of the crowd left for the outskirts of the city to spend the night in open fields. There was no evidence of looting during the panic, and busy police and officials had not had a chance to make a check of damage and fatalities.

Explosion Causes Damage

Norristown, Aug. 20.—A one ton cover on an oxygen tent at the Burdett Oxygen Company plant here was hurled 40 feet by an explosion today, and windows in the Reading Station, 300 feet distant, were broken. The tank was blown asunder with a roar that alarmed hundreds of residents.

Bandit Wounded

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—An innocent bystander and a bandit suspect lay wounded in a hospital here today, as the aftermath of an attempt by five masked bandits to hold up a book making establishment over a North Philadelphia tap room.

The victims, Tony Reads, 28, and Frank Vecoli, 23, described as a member of the hold-up gang, were shot down as police closed in on the escaping bandits. Three additional suspects were captured and the fifth escaped.

LEGIONNAIRES JAM YORK FOR CONVENTION

40 'N' 8 HOLDS ELECTION

YORK, Aug. 20.—More than 10,000 legionnaires are assembled here for the 19th annual convention, with their auxiliaries and junior departments.
The crowds poured into the city throughout the day. They jammed the hotels, the rooming houses, private homes, churches, gymnasiums and armories. They swamped overworked housing committee with requests for still more accommodations.

Henry Wright Rue Dies After Extended Illness

A native of Bristol and one who has resided here all his life, died yesterday after an extended period of illness, when Henry Wright Rue died at his home on Radcliffe street.

The deceased is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Violet R. Vance, Wycombe; one brother, one sister and two grandchildren.

Mr. Rue was a member of Fidelity Council, No. 21, Jr. O. U. A. M., and of the P. R. R. Relief Department. He was employed on the New York Division, P. R. R., for 32 years.

At one time Mr. Rue was a supervisor of Bristol Township, and during his term of office the road to China Hall was opened, and he was active in having the drinking fountain installed along the roadside at Newportville.

Relatives and friends, also the organizations of which he was a member, are invited to attend the funeral on Monday afternoon, at two o'clock, from the Friends' Meeting House, Market and Wood streets. Burial will be in the Friends' Graveyard. Friends may call Sunday evening at the Mol-den Funeral Home. The funeral will be under the direction of George Mol-den.

When the "Borinquen" steamed out of the New York City harbor yesterday, among its passengers were two attractive young women, the Misses Virginia C. Pearce and Mary M.
Pearce, daughters of Dr. and Mrs.
Samuel R. Pearce, 108 North Main street, Doylestown, bound for Porto Rico, where they will teach English.

Sister-teams are not uncommon on the stage nor in the musical world, but a sister-English-teacher team in the West Indies Islands will no doubt give the pupils either an "A" or a zero.

Highly enthusiastic in their new venture, teaching English to Spanish speaking school boys and girls in one of the most romantic spots in the world, the two sisters are not entering their new teaching field as novices, but have behind them experience gained in teaching in the Bucks County schools.

club on August 9 was in second place, with Pine Bluff, Arkansas, holding first position.

In session for the August meeting, Council members expressed the unaniat all hours of the day and night.

Although no definite action was tak-eliminate traffic jams.

GLADS ARE EASY FLOWERS TO GROW, SAYS SPEAKER

Curtis White, Johnsville, Says Failure Often Lies With The Grower

ADDRESSES THE SOCIETY

TREVOSE, Aug. 20.—"If you are not successful in growing gladioli don't blame the man from whom you bought the bulbs, but go over your own methods and see that you are doing as you should," Curtis White, Johnsville gladioli grower, told 175 men and women of the Trevese Horticulture Society.

"Ninety-five per cent of the trouble rests with the grower," Mr. Curtis stated.

Gladioli, Mr. White asserted, will grow in most any soil, and require as little care as any thing any flower grower can attempt to raise. The bulbs must be healthy, of that a grower should be cautious.

He advised a thorough soaking of the soil at least once a week, depending on the rainfall. Varieties which were mentioned as being attractive and outstanding included "Picardy," "Minuet" and "Star of Bethlehem."

Touching on the storing of the bulbs, the members were informed that the storage must be dry, well ventilated and a sprinkling of just enough naphthalene on the bulbs to produce a faint odor is the best method of preservation.

"While many of the blue shades are the most popular because of their odd shapes, they are weak growers," said Mr. White, who also added there are no true yellows on the market at the present time.

Of interest was the listing of the characteristics of a good gladioli which consist of a reasonably tall spike, 16 to 20 buds on the spike, four flowers open at a time, and pleasing colors.

Announcement was made that the flower show will be held September 10 and 11.

The next meeting of the society will be held Tuesday, September 21.
The speaker was presented by J. V.
Hare.

Twelve attendance prizes, consisting of iris and gladioli bulbs and potted plants were presented.

During the business session, Robert B. McKenney, Newtown, chairman of roadside planting, spoke on the Yucca and of the tiny moth which lives its short life in this flower. He also announced a meeting of the Delaware Valley Protective Association at Point Pleasant, August 27.

Newtown Exchange Club Receives Its Charter

A charter night program was enjoyed by Bristol Exchange Club members when they journeyed to Newtown last evening to witness the presentation of the charter to the newly-formed Newtown Exchange Club.

The Frankford, North Philadelphia, Mahanoy City, Northampton, and Cata-wauqua Exchange clubs were also represented at the meeting which was held in the Temperance House.

The Frankford club received a service banner for its part in the organization of the Newtown club. Fred Dagner, district governor, and a leading spirit in the organization of the new club, gave a brief address to the assembly.

Thirty-two charter members are included in the Newtown Exchange Club.
Following the dinner several club presidents were called upon for short talks.
Percy Ford, Bristol, led the group in songs.

The newly-organized Newtown club will meet every Thursday evening at 6.30, according to an announcement which was made to the group last evening.

BUCKS DAIRYMEN VISIT FARMS IN NEW JERSEY

One Hundred and Forty Persons Make the Trip in 38 Motor Cars

ASSEMBLE AT YARDLEY

The Bucks County Dairy Caravan, numbering 38 cars carrying 140 people made the annual tour on Tuesday when they visited six farms in New Jersey. The trip was in charge of County Agent William F. Greenawald and was a complete success.

The Bucks dairymen assembled at the Yardley River bridge on the Pennsylvania side at 9.45 o'clock and the first stop in New Jersey was at the Sheffield Farms Company, Scotch Road, where they saw a herd of 450 cows producing certified milk. The central milking room was visited and inspected.

The second stop, Wheldon Shiver's farm, near Ewing, was of interest because of the dairy and tomato farming project. Twenty-five cows were inspected here.

A herd of 39 milking cows was exhibited at the third stop which was the farm of T. P. Reed & Son, Pennington, N. J.

At the fourth stop, the farm of Charles Baldwin, Pennington, 50 head of pure-bred and grade Guernseys were seen.

Basket lunch was served following this visit, and the first farm to be visited in the afternoon was that of E.
O. Kling, Lawrenceville, where 300 head of Holstein and Jersey cows were on view.

The final farm to be visited was that of J. W. Miller, on the Princeton Pike, where a herd of 19 milking cows is maintained.

Of interest to the Bucks dairymen was the feature of the silos on the inside of the barn and the method of feeding cows by chutes from the barn floor.

SENATOR DAVIS TO SPEAK AT LANGHORNE, SEPT. 10

To Be Given Dinner by Langhorne-Middletown Alumni Ass'n, Prior to Meeting

THE PUBLIC IS INVITED

On Friday evening, September 10th, the Langhorne-Middletown High School Alumni Association, will observe the 150th anniversary of the making of the Constitution. The celebration will be held in the Bucks County Country Club at Langhorne.

The program will consist of a "Constitution Dinner" served at 6.30 p. m., and this will be open to all who desire to attend. The guest of honor will be the Hon. James J. Davis, U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania. Other outstanding men in the affairs of the county and state will also be present.

Following the dinner there will be an open meeting, called a "Constitution Meeting," and this meeting will be addressed by Senator Davis on the subject of "Labor and the Constitution."
There will be no admission charged to the meeting and the public is invited to attend.

After the meeting there will be dancing to be called "The Constitution Dance." The proceeds from the dance are to be used for the welfare fund to give relief to those in the school who are in need of dental or optical attention.

Tickets may be procured from any member of the association or at the Club. Reservations for the dinner will be accepted up until September 9th.
As this is the only celebration of its kind in Lower Bucks County in honor of the Constitution, it is believed there will be a large number who will desire to attend.

District Governor Visits Bristol Rotary Club

Bristol Rotarians met at the home of Mrs. Anna Grupp, Street and State Roads, Eddington, yesterday afternoon for their regular weekly session. Samuel Shanahan, District Governor of Rotary, paid his official visit to the club and was also the featured guest speaker.

Mr. Shanahan, preceding the regular meeting, met with the local club's officers, board of governors, and committee chairmen to discuss plans for the Bristol Club for the coming year.

One new member, Leslie Cox, Bristol, was installed at the meeting. Mr.
Cox is a representative of the Lucius Beebe Company in Bristol.

The speaker, Mr. Shanahan, talked on the four points of Rotary when he addressed the club members. He mentioned these points as: fellowship, ethical conduct in business, international conduct of business, and club activities.

A special program is planned for next week when the Club will meet at the Elks' Home in Bristol. Dr. Seay, Riders' College, Trenton, N. J., will be the guest speaker when he addresses club members and a number of young men who will enter college in the Fall.
These young men will be guests of the Club.

TAX COLLECTOR URGES PAYMENT NOW; SAVE 15%

Louis B. Girtton Explains How Saving Results From Paying Taxes Now

AVOID ALL PENALTIES

After Aug. 31, 5% Penalty On Borough Tax, and Same on School Tax After Sept. 30

Those who have not as yet paid their borough or school taxes may do so now and save 15 percent, according to Louis B. Girtton, tax collector. In explanation of the saving which will ac-cure to taxpayers by making payments now, Mr. Girtton explains that there is a general rebate on all taxes for general purposes if paid before August 31st, and then after that period a penalty of five percent is added, hence a saving of ten percent on all taxes for general purposes paid on or before August 31st.

School tax is received flat up until September 30th, after which there is a penalty of five percent added.

From the above explanation it can be readily figured that the 10 percent saved on the general purpose tax and the five percent saved on school taxes, makes a total saving of 15 percent to those who pay their general purpose and school taxes, now.

Personal taxes, under the present law, are deductible from an individual's wages or salary, regardless of where said individual is employed.

ELABORATE TOYS

One bears voices from the East raised in a plea that the America's Cup be put in the mothballs. It is suggested that the time, ingenuity and money lavished on 120 miles of racing this year might have been put into a test of the ability of real ships, as distinguished from elaborate toys, over a distance which would bring out seaworthiness in the craft and seamanship at the sheets and helm.

A cross-Atlantic race would be the liking of some Down Easters, with a taste for sailing, but none for what one of them calls "bathtub racing." Such an event would not entirely suspend the battle of wits between designers, to which the races this year seemed an anti-climax. Superior design would count, but no more than sailing ability in the personnel. Those human attributes which are obscured in competitions between racing machines would come into their own.

The handicaps which now beset the challenger for the America's Cup will become no less. They seem too decisive to let the races continue in the sports category. A real race, calling on all the qualities cherished in the old-time clipper and its crew, would please thousands with the sea in their veins but no vast enthusiasm in their souls for an event which begins and ends to all purposes—ends on a drawing board.

HOME STUDY

Are school children burning up too much nervous energy in home study? Complaints are heard from parents in many places, that too much home work is required.

Our guess would be that more children are hurt by late hours at parties, and too much loafing around the streets. If you let up on home study, they may go in for things that hurt them still more. Perhaps some nervous children should be given easier lessons.

But it ordinarily takes about a dozen years to complete a grammar and high school course, and it would not seem as if the average child was doing it in too short a time.

A ROOSEVELT APPOINTMENT

Appointment of Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, to the Supreme Court of the United States was an appointment that only Franklin D. Roosevelt could have made. In the circumstances it is some comfort to know, however, that six Blacks will not be appointed to the Supreme Court all at once.

If a Southern Democratic Senator were desired for the bench for political reasons, and all Roosevelt appointments are political, is there anyone in the South who would not place Black at the bottom of the list for his high honor?

But, of course, 27,000,000 people can't be wrong—at least not while half of them are receiving checks from Washington regularly.

Headlessness of traffic regulations by pedestrians is a major factor in accidents. Does the safe driver, who observes all the rules when he is behind the wheel, throw caution to the wind when he takes to shank's mare? Or is it the gambler in us?

A Chinese dispatch says the Japanese fear mutiny among Manchoukuo troops. The wish fathering the thought again?

Don't depend on laws. A man can be the worst of scoundrels and never do anything illegal.

"THE CRUISE TO NOWHERE"

by JERRY FROSCHER

SYNOPSIS

Taylor Chapin comes to and finds himself aboard a strange yacht. The last he can remember he was at a night club. There had been a raid and he was struck on the head. To add to the mystery, he finds a suitcase in his cabin filled with clothes, his size and bearing his initials. Chapin questions the crew, but none of them speaks English. Just as he is about to approach a man bending over the rail violently ill, the man goes into his stateroom and locks the door. A moan and a voice droning, "It's murder—murder—I tell you!" issues from the lounge. Chapin rushes in just as Sidney Hart, millionaire publisher, topples to the floor—dead! Hart was Chapin's employer. As Chapin leans over the body, Dick Hampton, advertising manager of Hart's magazine, "Gay Fiction," appears. He, too, is puzzled by his own presence on the yacht. Chapin and Hampton look up to see a white-haired woman standing in the doorway. "What are you doing aboard my yacht?" she demands, then seeing the body, exclaims "Daddy!" The mystery deepens with the appearance of Grace Devin, Hart's secretary, and Phil Ryder, his jockey, who also claim they were shanghaied. Chapin learns the white-haired woman is Mrs. Montgomery-Glass, and the man who was seasick is her lawyer, Paul Dupont. Mrs. Glass claims she is Hart's daughter-in-law by her first marriage. The publisher had never mentioned her. While they are discussing Mr. Hart's death, one of the crew rushes in with the news that the captain has also been murdered. Mrs. Glass is genuinely puzzled by the killings but suspects Chapin and his friends. Archie Montgomery, Mrs. Glass's son, appears. He has a crafty look and Chapin wonders how much he knows about the murders. The bodies of the victims disappear. The four suspects are locked up. Through error, Chapin is placed in Archie's room. The prisoner finds a letter to Archie, signed "Grace," reading: "I am afraid something drastic will have to be done before your grandfather approves of our engagement." Could it be Grace Devin?

CHAPTER VI

Archie Montgomery stood framed in the doorway. A look of extreme annoyance governed his features. "Of all the nerve!" he exclaimed, angrily. "What are you doing in my room?"

Chapin answered: "I was pushed in here, and locked in. What about it?"

"Humph! Another mistake of Paul's, I suppose. Do you remember the letter of the room that you were in before?"

"Listen, Montgomery," Chapin said crossly, ignoring the question. "What do you hope to gain by this rough stuff—locking us up? On the face of it, does it seem possible that either Hampton or myself killed Sidney Hart? And as for the captain, what possible motive could we have had for killing him?"

There was a crafty look in Archie's eyes, as he drawled: "Well—I don't know you. I don't know that you ever worked for the old man. I know that there was a chap by the name of Taylor Chapin working for him, but how am I to know that you are not posing under that name? That story of you being put on board, unconscious, looks fishy to me. My guess is, that the four of you had some purpose in coming aboard, so you sneaked on, and made up a dramatic story. Of course, your purpose was to rub out the old man. I don't know who you expected to gain by it, but I suppose it was something. If just one of you had been on board, I guess you thought you wouldn't have stood a chance at not being caught—but the four of you cooking up a fancy story, I guess it looked easy to you. As for the captain, he probably got suspicious, and you bumped him off for knowing too much." He slumped into a convenient chair, and lighted a cigarette.

"If the captain couldn't speak English, he couldn't have heard much to be suspicious about," Chapin objected.

"You don't know this Maori out here. They're a suspicious lot, and I didn't say that he had heard anything. He may have seen something."

"Did you find the bodies?" Chapin asked, after a pause, in which he considered many angles.

"No," Archie muttered sullenly. "Come on, which room were you in before? I don't have to have you squatting on my bunk all day."

He reached over to the wall and pressed a button.

mood to talk about it. All my plans have been upset."

There was a discreet knock at the door, and Archie admitted one of the Maoris. He said a few words in the unknown language, haltingly, and made motions. It was evident to Chapin that he was not as well acquainted with the lingo as Dupont.

The man looked a little uncertain, and Chapin said, fiercely: "Look here, Montgomery, if you are thinking of having this black man handle me again, I'll never rest until I give you a good licking. I'll go to Room F by myself and you can lock me up, if you are tired of my company. But send that black away."

Archie waved the man away with a careless gesture, and lighted another cigarette.

Chapin edged toward the door before Archie stood up. He thought vaguely of making a get-away, but realized immediately that it was useless, and besides, he was anxious to examine the document he had taken, and the clipping. "If" proved to be next to Archie's room. Chapin walked in there, and Archie thrust the key in the lock, and clicked it. As soon as his foot-steps died away, Chapin spread out the document. Saw, at once, that it was, presumably, a copy of Sidney Hart's last will and testament. He scanned it briefly, and learned that Paul Dupont was named as one of the executors. Five million dollars was divided in equal shares. To his "beloved daughter-in-law, Mathilda Hart Montgomery-Glass," his "faithful workers, Richard Hampton, Grace Devin and Taylor Chapin," and to "the best jockey in America, Philip Ryder." Chapin whistled softly. It came as a complete surprise that Sidney Hart had planned to leave any such munificent amount to him. There was a deep significance, also, in the fact that the other four, who were to receive an equal share were participants of this mysterious voyage.

There were other small bequests, to servants and friends. Chapin read through the list carefully. Noted that Archie Montgomery's name was not included. Went over the list again. The name was not there. He wondered what Archie had done to displease the old man? And thought of the letter signed "Grace." Removed the clippings from the leather folder, and scanned the top one. It was too dark to read newspaper print, comfortably. Stood up to reach for the light switch, and wondered, suddenly, if they were within sight of land? Looked out of the window, half expecting to see tiny flecks of light glowing in the distance—was disappointed. Remembered that this room faced starboard—sighed—and snapped on the light.

He read, that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Devin announced the engagement of their daughter, Grace, to Mr. Archibald Montgomery, and was not surprised. He was certain now, that Archie was the murderer. Thought that Archie had conceived the weird plan of shanghaiing Hampton and himself, in order to establish a semblance of guilt. Grace Devin's story was entirely untrue, and had been part of the plan. And for some indefinable reason, he entertained doubts concerning Ryder. Perhaps, because Archie had seemed as disinterested at the mention of the jockey's name, as at the girl's. There was also, the fact, that both the girl and Ryder, had claimed not to have investigated the room closets, until after Hampton had mentioned finding the suitcase in his.

Probably, he reasoned, Sidney Hart had been bitter about Grace's engagement to Archie. Probably the drastic thing that Archie had decided upon was murder. The million dollars that Grace would inherit was motive enough. Hart may have threatened to cut her off. And Archie, in his haste to forestall this measure, must have schemed accordingly. The date on the clipping was scarcely a month old. The situation was narrowing down. He had planned that he should discover Sidney Hart, dying, and that Hampton should be in the lounge when Mrs. Glass entered. He could not figure exactly how this plan had been arranged, but on the face of it there was a feasible idea, and quite enough to convince a jury of their guilt. Archie had been quick to mention "circumstantial evidence." He couldn't quite fit in the purpose of having Ryder on board. No doubt there was some underlying motive. He began to wonder if Mrs. Glass was as innocent as she had appeared when listening to their stories? Remembered that she had dragged Grace along from the deck in a frenzy that was far from gentle. Recalled the cynical expression with which Grace had regarded the older woman, at their first meeting. Decided that Mrs. Glass was being victimized. And Dupont? Archie did not seem to be clever enough to pull off any such nefarious scheme alone. Dupont, with a lawyer's ability to work out details, might have aided Archie. On the other hand, Archie might have counted on the other's lethargy, as the result of seasickness. The man had been seasick. Some people are always seasick on the water. Dupont might be one of those people, and Archie had known it. He had had Grace to connive with. She looked smart enough to plot and engineer an intrigue.

Archie had mentioned some project, that a return to New York would interfere with. The two corpses had been disposed of, thereby preventing an autopsy that would reveal an analysis of the poison used. The seaman had been hiding to confuse the navigator. The "project," undoubtedly, was premeditated crime, and would involve further crime. He shuddered, dimly, and turned to the next clipping.

This pertained to the history of the yacht Carmen. The Carmen had been owned originally by a prominent copper magnate. The name in the opening paragraph was somewhat blurred. It looked like Montagu. The Carmen had been manned by Maori officers and crew, and during a world cruise, Mr. Anthony—Chapin drew the clipping closer, and made out the name—Montgomery, and continued avidly. "Mr. Montgomery's" clipping stated, "died suddenly, and was buried in mid-Pacific. The cause of his death is said to be unknown, and there is a certain element of mystery surrounding the meager details given to the press." In a final paragraph it was mentioned that Mr. Montgomery had been divorced in 1922, and that his former wife had subsequently married Stephen Glass, a wealthy Wall Street broker. A son, Archibald Montgomery, had been with his father on the world cruise.

Another clipping told of the late Anthony Montgomery's will. The entire residue of the estate, amounting to three million dollars, had been left to Archie Montgomery.

Chapin whistled. If Archie had inherited three million dollars in 1928, which was the date of the clipping—why?

There were too many "whys" to be considered at the moment. Chapin fingered the next clipping, eagerly. "Millionaire Playboy a Bankrupt," was the caption under date of September 28, 1930. Archie, according to this item, had lost a fortune in Wall Street.

The last clipping was dated May 1933, and recorded the sale of the yacht Carmen, which had been put up at auction for the second time, since 1930, and had been purchased by Mrs. Montgomery-Glass, who had at one time been the wife of the original owner. A key scraped in the lock. Chapin, startled from his reverie, tossed the clippings and the copy of the will into the drawer of the bedside table, closed it, and tried to look at ease. The door opened, and Dupont entered, followed by one of the crew, who was bearing a napkin-covered tray.

"What time do we get into New York?" Chapin queried, affably.

"Can't say," Dupont returned, shortly. "Are you anxious to spend the night in jail?"

"I don't know why I should spend the night in jail. I can prove that I was shanghaied." He couldn't, of course, but he wanted to see if this statement would have any effect upon Dupont.

But the latter only shrugged, indifferently. Then, in a more friendly tone, he said: "To be frank, I was inclined to believe your story, fantastic as it seemed, until we discovered that Mr. Hart's body was missing."

"What about the captain? You were supposed to have seen that his body was placed in his quarters. Have they found his body?"

"No," Dupont passed a hand through his hair with a weary gesture, and sat down on the foot of the bed.

The Maori had placed the tray on the table, uncovered it, and arranged the food. Dupont waved him away.

"I have been so cussed seasick," he began, "that I can't seem to realize the enormity of all that has happened, or what is back of it. Would you mind telling me what your theory is?"

"My theory wouldn't hold water, I'm afraid," Chapin answered, cautiously.

"What do you think of Hampton?"

"I think his story is as true as mine is."

"Vicious temper!" Dupont stated, and shivered, involuntarily. "I've just been talking to him. He sighed, as though the conversation had been distinctly unpleasant, and glanced at his watch. "It's after seven. I told Mrs. Glass that I would join her for dinner at quarter past. Think it over, Chapin, and if you decide to discuss your theory with me, before we land, push the button there, and I'll drop around."

"No first rate power, and few smaller ones rank as low in military strength," he said. "Portugal and Greece has a force greater than our combined regular army, navy, national guard, officers reserve corps and all reserve units."

Johnson, a former national commander of the Legion, declared that Sweden is ready to put into the field 500,000 men in an emergency, "while our available strength for immediate use is less than 500,000 men."

Senator James J. Davis, making an unexpected appearance at the opening session took the occasion to strike out at the threatened domination of the country by "extremists and crackpots."

Referring to the Sino-Japanese conflict, Senator Davis urged withdrawal from the area of all American nationals, including armed forces, to avoid possible entanglement in the crisis.

Davis, in discussing the phase of social security dealing with child welfare, gave the Legion much credit for its activities in this field begun 10 years before the Nation adopted security measures of its own.

Nearly 2000 delegates to the convention, packed into the high school auditorium, were officially welcomed for the city by Mayor Harry B. Anstine.

Mayor Anstine also welcomed members of the legion auxiliary, holding separate sessions at Christ Lutheran Chapel, under the leadership of Mrs. Elen P. Keen, of Honesdale, department president.

Philadelphia's only prominent candidate for office appeared to be Mrs. James E. Casey, of the Hotel Normandie, who is running for department president. She is now Eastern vice-president, and faces competition from Mrs. Sally Homer, of Allegheny county.

Colonel Vincent A. Carroll, Assistant District Attorney and a legion national executive committee member from Pennsylvania, is being urged strongly to run for the post of national commander.

Carroll remained non-committal on the subject. There are only two candidates in the field for the department commandiership. They are William F. ("Bill") Smith, Punxsutawney coal broker, who is believed to have the lead position, and Charles S. Cook, of West Pittston, a lieutenant in the State Motor Police.

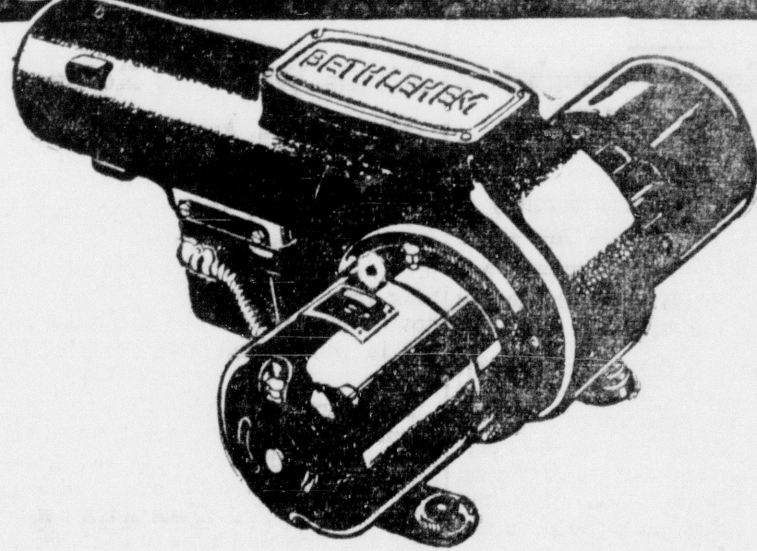

State officers of the 40 and 8 were elected and installed at colorful ceremonies yesterday afternoon, preceding the parade and "wreck" which featured the evening program.

Those seated were Arthur S. Anders, of Hellertown, Grand Chef De Gare; William Diamond, of Altoona, Grand Chef De Train; Thomas W. Monroe, of Derry, Grand Commissaire Intendant; Howard Bittner, of Latrobe, Grand Conductor; Abe M. Goldstein, of Lewistown, Chemnot Nationale; Ivan Legore, Hanover, Chemnot Nationale alternate; John Owens of Philadelphia, grand correspondent; Dr. A. H.

Wittman, of Philadelphia; Walter Gebhart, of Lancaster; Joseph Leary, of Johnstown; and Roy Anderson, of Hazleton, grand cheminots. Joseph Robbins, of Philadelphia, Voiture No. 1, was named the outstanding voyager of 1937 and presented with a gift.

THE NEW BETHLEHEM-DOE OIL BURNERS

A Hotter Flame on Less Oil

... and its ability to burn the heavier, cheaper grades of fuel, makes this the most economical Bethlehem-Doe Oil Burner ever offered by this century-old institution.

Bethlehem's unique aero dynamic design and patented Rotair Diffuser provide this operating economy—make oil burning comparable in cost to the burning of other common fuels.

And Bethlehem's exclusive "Monitor Mechanism," which contains in one unit all operating parts mounted on a single shaft, banishes basement servicing entirely. For it may be removed and replaced by a duplicate unit in a few minutes—without interruption in home comfort—if the burner should ever require attention throughout its life.

Here is automatic oil heat at its best—yet for which you pay no premium. That utilizes your present coal burning heater without needless extra expense.

Why wait longer to enjoy its comfort and convenience, when you may have it for only a few cents a day on our deferred payment plan?

Come and see, and ask about it. There is no obligation.

PUT Eternit SHINGLES OVER YOUR OLD ROOF... YOU WILL HAVE A NEW ROOF FOR THE LIFE OF YOUR HOME

YOU can apply a new roof of Eternit Asbestos Cement Shingles over your present roof—eliminating the bother and expense of removing the old shingles. The Eternit roof will remain "new" for the life of your home, for Eternits are made from two practically indestructible fireproof substances—Portland Cement and tough asbestos fibres. The low cost will surprise you.

LANDRETH EASILY WINS OVER NORTH PHILLIES

The North Phillies were easy for the Landreth Seeds last night at Landreth hall park, the home team winning by the score of 13-2.

The "Farmers" hit Lefty Erb, the visitors' starting ace, hard, finally driving him from the mound in the third inning. Seven runs were scored. DeBoskey's base on balls, Heisley's sacrifice, Dougherty's single, counting two runners. An error by Horne and Lodge's homer accounted for three. Harwi's hit, a two-bagger by Griggs and Breslin's single drove in two more after Kluge replaced Erb on the pitching mound.

"Mel" Heisley held the visitors to five hits, one a line drive from the bat of Kluge in the second inning which went to deep center for a home run. George Dougherty was the batting star of the game, making three hits, a single, double and a triple and walking one.

The "Farmers" played a fast game in the field, two lightning double plays featuring.

Landreth Seeds will play the North City Legion of the Quaker City League this evening at 19th and Olney avenue in Philadelphia.

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—Oh for the life of a monkey when the temperature is 100 in the shade!

For monkeys it appears just dote on the heat.

Dr. James P. Kerr, owner of "Jake," a pet monkey, said his pet became so frisky when a hot spell occurred he was forced to give it to a zoo.

While humans sweltered "Jake" would sit in a window sunning himself. Then he perched atop a radiator, warm from the sun, and ate a banana.

RACCAGNO TO RETURN TO AMATEUR BOXING

After a lay-off of two seasons, Johnny "Dundee" Raccagno, St. Ann's slugger, will return to amateur warfare Monday night when he meets William Desmond, Sigma Theta, in one of the all-star bouts carded for the weekly shows sponsored by the St. Ann's Athletic Association.

Raccagno gained quite a following during his short amateur career, especially the night in the Italian Mutual Aid ring when he kayoed two opponents, both in the first round. He possessed a record of five straight knockouts before he was held to a decision.

The St. Ann's glove has been in training for the past month and now feels that he is able to cope with some of the 147-pounders. He intends to work himself up and is attempting to be in tip-top trim for the Philadelphia tournament which takes place about the middle of September.

The Raccagno-Desmond bout is but one of the bouts in which a localite will take part. It is the intention of Match Maker Sammy Moffo to fill one side of the card with youths from Bristol and Holmesburg against those of mixed Philadelphia clubs.

That means that every Bristol youth in training will get a bout, if possible. Leo Cicanti, Vince Della, Tally Sciarra, Carl Spinelli and Sylvester Purnell made up the training session in St. Ann's gym last night.

Bristolians are keeping their eyes pinned on the slugging southpaw, Leo Cicanti. Cicanti has fought twice, and on each occasion the referee had to stop the bout to save Cicanti's foe from further punishment. Ring-side observers in the last St. Ann's show claim that the Purple and Gold warrior has one of the most devastating lefts in the 126-lb class of the amateur circle.

Tickets for the all-star show can be procured by phoning the St. Ann's club-house, 9534. At every show the crowd increases, and according to advance reports, the St. Ann's athletic committee expects this show to top them all, as there will be just a few more outdoor bouts before the season closes.

HIBERNIANS TO TRY TO PREVENT RIVALS SCORING

Can the Hibernians prevent the Odd Fellows from scoring in three tilts?

That is the question that is on the lips of almost every baseball fan of the Bristol Twilight League as the teams prepare for their next game which will be played on the Edgely diamond, Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

In the two games played thus far, Billy Gallagher and Dave Ennis have pitched shutout ball, a total of sixteen innings. Combined they have set 17 Odd Fellows down on strikes. Where is the power of the Oddies' team that carried them to the second half championship?

"Jake" Paul pitched good enough ball to win any ordinary ball game Tuesday evening but the Odd Fellows' punch in the pinch was missing and because Paul pitched a home run ball to George Dougherty, he was beaten.

Feeling that the Odd Fellows have seen just about enough of southpaw pitching in the two games played, it is most likely that Manager Lawrence Delaney may shift his tactics and start "Henny" Morgan on the mound. Morgan pitched good ball during the season and several times in tight spots came through with fine relief pitching.

Manager Sutton has not used Hal Snyder against his former team-mates and he may get the nod in order to attempt to win and prolong the series.

R. D. WOOD BALL NINE TO PLAY LANDRETH SEEDS

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Landreth Ball Park, R. D. Wood of Florence, N. J., will oppose the Landreth Seeds.

R. D. Wood and the farmers are playing this year a five game series. The first game was won by Florence 5 to 4. The second game was won by Landreth in 10 innings 2 to 1. So, the third game this Sunday should be most interesting.

On Saturday, August 28th, the locals play in Florence and if another game is necessary to decide the series it will probably be played in Bristol about the middle of September.

Whenever these teams meet there is plenty of action, so Sunday's game should be no exception and should be a most interesting game to watch. It is expected that a large crowd will be on hand.
